THIRD MEN IN RING VIOLATORS OF RULE

London Code Specifically Provided That Bets Follow the Decision of Referee.

CORBETT - SHARKEY ROW

Muldoon's Action Inspired by a Determination to Break Up Betting Element.

By CHARLES F. MATHISON.

Calling off bets on boxing contests s an ancient practice and in most intances has been employed to thwart the schemes of dishonest boxers or promoters. Referees have frequently announced from the ring that bets were called off, and while the action thus taken has in many cases saved the money of victims of prearranged contests, a large proportion of betters have paid their wagers.

The announcement by the New York State Athletic Commission that bets were off on the Britton-Walker bout was the first time in history that a State boxing board has taken such action. The object was to forestall a supposed betting coup that manifested itself in the eleventh hour shifting of the odds in Tavor of Britton to Walker. Fortunately, there was nothing in the contest to substantiate suspicions as to collusion, and when this was made clear a a large proportion of the wagers were hald. Naturally some of those who had bet on Britton took advantage of the announcement by the commission and fortused to pay, much to the grief and irritation of those who had backed Walker to win the battle. The same was true of the Sharkey-Corbett consist, on which bets were declared off by the referse. Many who had wagered to Corbett refused payment, but the majority paid their wagers, although they had considerable ground for the bellef that the contest was not all that it should have been. Corbett was a hot favorite to defeat the Sallor, and during the bout the former champion gave Sharkey a boxing lesson. In the bellef that the contest was not all that it should have been. boxing and that they may come into iniversal use. There might be some delay in having them incorporated in the boxing law of this State because the ring rules are a part of the Walker law, and this would have to be amended before the boxing code could be changed.
